It would be of course too cynical to point out, that while most scenarios of human extinction carry the condition that all life goes with us, this one pertains to the human species alone (and its thousands of nuclear bombs and other pollutants), and leaves all other life in peace. However the line between cynicism and the truth is always very fine.

Posting this here, because StanleyBecker is well aware of who is behind soy-based food concepts. Can only imagine a continuing downward spiral as any push to feed humans unfermented soy continues... Ongoing attempts to "engineer" plants as substitute food:

techcrunch.com/2017/08/01/impossible-foods-just-raised-75-million-for-.. - the first articles on this topic came out in 2013 or thereabouts. This article link is from 1 August 2017!! and it ties in nicely to issues in Japan not only to conform in a non-growth economy but also soy consumption may be at the bottom of some "decline in fertility" issues: www.scientificamerican.com/article/soybean-fertility-hormone-isoflavon.. - this article is from 2009, and if I remember correctly, Dr Mercola has a long article thread on this topic. So once you get past the above listed endocrine disrupting chemicals, what about soy? Unfermented soy is passing the lips of people worldwide now, as soy is in damn near every processed and packaged food, even "organic mayonnaise" has soy oil, its cheap and dangerous to play with!

Thank you Dr. Mercola for drawing the line to radiofrequency radiation as a source of infertility in men. I remember there used to be a "save the males" advertisement in England in the public bathrooms--against cell phones in the pocket. So many men and boys carry them there, radiating their testes most of the day.

It is prob not good to carry it in a shirt pocket over the heart, either. Those advertisements have a broader message about how unsafe cell phones really are anywhere within the energy field of the human body.

Humanity is being hit from so many sides extinction would be inevitable if God didn't step in and stop the process! I'm reminded of Mathew 24:21....."for then there will be great tribulation such as has not occurred since the world's beginning until now, no, nor will occur again. 22. In fact, unless those days were cut short, no flesh would be saved; but on account of the chosen ones those days will be cut short." God's word always comes true! First Tribulation, then Armageddon (where the wicked will be destroyed).....read your Bible and discover what God's requirements are for survival.

Just received a letter today from PG&E (our electric & gas works) that they will begin replacing all of the street lights in town. All 424 "High Pressure Sodium Vapor" (HPSV) bulbs will be replaced with "Light-Emitting Diode" (LED) fixtures. Guess that means not going out on the town at night. :(

edit @ grulla, you are probably right about LED up close. I'll hit the streets at night and get back to you.

The damage is so obvious but people are addicted to their smart phones. Try telling them and they think you are nuts for pointing out something that's ruining their lives. It's like a Twilight Zone episode. "57% Of American Women Choose Smartphone Over Sex" "The study asked 4,000 women from the United Kingdom, United States, Canada, France, Germany, and Brazil about their use of mobile phones and social media channels and whether it impacts their dating life.

More than 50 percent of women said they have or would break up with their partner over the phone, while more than 25 percent have or would via text message. Most of the women, 61 percent, who would break up over the phone are 18 to 25 year olds, while older women, 45 to 54 year olds, said they would consider or have ended their relationships over the phone. Nearly 19 percent said they have or would break up over Facebook. " www.medicaldaily.com/57-american-women-choose-smartphone-over-sex-2461..

I can actually feel the radio-field when I carry my cell in a pocket. I rarely do that because I do know of the dangers. Occasionally I have to grab and go and I slip it into a back pocket of my jeans or a side cargo pocket and as soon as possible I take it out of there. Usually it is in a leather case inside my leather purse. I do see so may people with it in pockets though.

I'm not sure if it's the flouride in the water dumbing people down in USA, Canada, Australia and N.Z. or the emf. My builder confided in me that he and his wife couldn't have children. He drove off in his truck and I couldn't help noticing he had put his i-phone on the seat between his legs. Didn't feel I knew him well enough to say anything. The girl I bought a phone from said she kept her i-phone in her bra. When I pointed out the dangers of this and that she should read the warnings on the instruction sheet she said "oh well ... I'm still going to do it because it's easy and convenient"! The last one was when I met a young 30+ restaurant owner who was missing a quarter of his skull. He said he had had a tumour on the brain and that the doctor had told him he shouldn't use the mobile phone next to his head. He told us this while he took reservations on his phone (right on his ear). He said "what can I do I have a restaurant to run". He was dead in a year. What the!!!!

Ironically our poisoning of the earth may end up saving it if the human population is reduced drastically in the process. Environmentalists have suggested that in order to be sustainable, the maximum human population should be 2 billion. If every fertile woman has one less child in the next fifty years, apparently, we will achieve that number by 2100. Maybe our foolishness will help us achieve this.

In 1990, when I was having trouble conceiving, my husband had his sperm tested, and he had only 50% normal forms (referred to as morphology). Because 70% normal was the average, he was considered subfertile. Ten years later, the average normal morphology was down to 30% worldwide, so he would have been considered a stud. Since the average of any given year are considered "normal" (rather than what is biologically desirable), the entire male population is heading toward subfertility. Alas, it isn't affecting the birthrate worldwide, but as you mentioned, in developed countries, the birth rate is falling. A recent survey of young Japanese men found that over half would rather play video games than have sex. Their population is well below replacement level.

And of course women tend to be more cooperative than men and so would be more likely to share the wealth. Sort of an opposite of "A Handmaid's Tale". That the ova chooses the sperm is not mentioned here or most other places. It is generally considered that it only takes one speedy sperm to do the job, but obviously if 50 million sperm per milliliter is necessary, it must take a gang to stimulate the ova to accept the one. It makes evolutionary sense that pre patriarchy that women would have more than one and even many sperm donors. During fertility women become much more receptive. At least in my experience. For healthy fertilization it seems the more the merrier. Life is a cabaret !! I live in Ecuador. The availability of numerous fertile men here raises the idea for a business catering to women from developed countries. What do you think?

For home building and painting products that are significantly lower in chemicals, try the AFM products <http://www.afmsafecoat.com> They also make a sealant that seals out offgassing from toxic paints, formaldehyde in plywood, etc. I do not work for them and have no inside connections. We have used their products in our home and are very happy with most of them.

Try also using wheatgrass board instead of formaldehyde-loaded plywood for furniture and other items around the home. The wheatgrass board may not be structurally strong for reinforcing a house, but It is great for cabinets, counters and the like. And smells lovely at least in the beginning, it is a fully renewable resource, and cuts way down on chemical exposure!

We think we are so educated in our society. The truth is that humankind is absolutely stupid with their chemicals. Please think of ONE chemical that has not done environmental and/or bodily harm. If you can think of it, please list it below. I am curious. Chemicals mostly do more harm than good, if we think about it. It is time for real education, at last.

mirandola - Good thoughts! You're last paragraph reminds me of the line that Natalie Portman says in Cold Mountain when someone tries to hand her a gun - "If I had my way all metal would be removed from this world". That's how I feel about chemicals. I had a friend who worked in a lab that tested chemicals to determine if they were carcinogenic. She said they never tested anything that did not have the potential to be carcinogenic. And your comment about the material used in home construction is right on. Asians, Africans and South Americans are all exposed to chemicals and emf, yet they still have good sperm counts. However, they live in houses that are much more natural than the typical 'modern' toxic house in the US. Most of us spend more time in our home than anywhere else. The second most occupied space are the toxic buildings we work in. Natural building should be a significant component of this discussion.

Thank you Krofter! We DO get a ton of chemical exposure from office buildings, schools, RVs, homes.....all alike, There is such a thing as Sick Building Syndrome. Myself, having survived and conquered environmental illness decades ago, I know first-hand what chemical exposure from home building does to the body. It is not a joke. It affects the nervous system, endocrine and immune systems, all alike, to be chemically exposed. No wonder the NIH has traced the root of cancer causes to chemicals in the environment. deainfo.nci.nih.gov/advisory/pcp/annualReports/pcp08-09rpt/PCP_Report_.. But that's a whole other topic, even if related to the same root cause.

Poshest, water is one good example of a natural substance that nurtures and sustains, and happens to have several chemicals as its makeup. Just like anything else on the planet. That is not the same as isolated, concentrated chemicals. The isolation and concentration and artificiality thereof, are The Problem.

Axkershaw, fully agreed, good comment thank you! I think from the comments, what may not be understood is that formaldehyde in plywood offgasses and really does harm. It is directly linked to cancer among other things and is very drying to membranes. As a formerly environmentally sensitive person, I would say that breathing in a room with wheat that was sprayed with glyphosate (which I don't like the idea of even one little bit, and always boycott as much as I can), compared to breathing in a room with formaldehyde....there simply is no comparison. Trust me I would react much more to the formaldehyde fumes than to glyphosate sprayed on wheat, much as I agree that we must never patronize this noxious brew, ugh! Plywood and other building materials can be very noxious.

It concerns me that these medical professionals, who are arguably 'scientists', routinely equate different frequencies of electromagnetic radiation with each other. Light is electromagnetic radiation in a certain frequency range, and I think most people don't think that visible light is harmful to humans. But a laser uses highly concentrated visible light, and that can be harmful to humans. Ultraviolet light from the sun is great for helping humans to create vitamin D, but too much of it will cause a sunburn and then skin cancer. We really do not know if radio waves from cellphones are dangerous to humans, but we suspect that they might be. Equating microwaves emitted from a microwave oven with similar-frequency cell phone 'radio waves' is terribly misleading. It is not just the frequency of EM radiation that determines the damage such waves cause to humans, it is a combination of the frequency and the intensity. Also, particle radiation, like that which is emitted from a nuclear bomb or used in a nuclear power plant, is not the same as electromagnetic radiation such as light or radio waves or microwaves.

In his adult exam room, pointed to a prominent overhead lamp with purple lens, and the response I got was it was not used often, as too much x-ray exposure can be dangerous. Fast forward 40 years, and how many x-rays are humans given by doctors and dentists? What about mammograms? Nevermind idiotic machines concocted for the TSA to check flying safety!

A large percentage of our planet's food has been compromised, thanks to the glyphosate/GMO movement. And then we have chest thumping world leaders just salivating as to when they can push the little button that makes the bombs go off. In some cases it seems that logic and common sense are already very close to extinction.

This article makes me wonder about all the gender confusion suddenly showing up. If boys and girls start out basically the same, and are differentiated based on healthy hormone development, then it seems reasonable that endocrine disrupters might be a cause of feminization in boys or masculinity in girls. This would point to chemical toxicity causing sexual identity issues to the degree a person feels they were born homosexual, or they were born as a boy trapped in a girl's body. Maybe this wave of societal chaos is a consequence of GMO glyphosate, and other toxic contaminates. Of course, there could be other reasons, as well, but the theory is forming.

This has been suspected LONG ago. Docs in the Bay Area, CA, along the Carquinez Straights, suspected chemicals spilled routinely into the Straights, by chemical companies and refineries, among others. It's been known for over 3 or 4 decades, that it was unsafe to eat fish caught there....if starving, only eat maybe one per month....otherwise, catch/release.

But the Docs who figured out something was wrong with reproductive health along the Carquinez Straights, put a small article in the Contra Costa Times, that they were setting up to research causes of reproductive problems in the area. Maybe 2 small articles...and they were threatened to cease and desist, or never practice medicine anywhere again.

Those profiteering by selling toxins, are really aggressive at stopping anyone looking too deep into what they are doing. The companies lie to employees about safety, too. Then, there's the thing about what nature does, to limit populations of animals, if there's too many of them to live decently....who is looking into that? Perhaps there's something to that, even for humans?

When the human race becomes too immoral and the amount of righteous people becomes only a small number, the civilizations get wiped out. This is apparent through history with the Great Flood, the sinking of Atlantis, ends of all Dynasties. Well, according to ancient texts we are at the end of this experiment. If anyone peruses youtube comments, you will see the hate and evil in the minds of humans. The most popular celebrities are porn stars and sex tape women. Trisha Paytas, Kim Kardashian etc. We are an immoral civilization on average and humans are filled with hate for others (youtube comments prove this). We are being exterminated. And the people in the alt news, like Alex Jones, or David Icke followers want to throw viscious racial hatred around and prove that they are the cause of the evil, because they feed into it daily. I cannot peruse news on the internet without racial hatred. "On one side of some of these people's mouths they speak of love and god and on the other, they seeth and spread viscous racial hatred, that would make Hitler proud. Just like it says in the bible before the great flood, God said the wicked outweighed the good. And man has declined in immorality and is filled with evil thoughts. Well, nothing has changed today, and the good are few in number and the planet is being exterminated. And no one will be able to change this, because it's the wickedness in man's thoughts that's causing this to happen as it's a spiritual spanking. And the dark forces who poison the human race are given the go ahead to end this experiment as this human species had failed to do as the spiritual teachers have taught and that is to be unconditional love. Now how many people do you know embody what spiritual teachers have taught. Hardly any, and as the years go on, humans become more and more evil. This is what man has brought to him/herself. This experiment is over. Get spiritual and learn to fix oneself, as this ride is coming to an end.

Oh and by the way, the human race is being transhumanized with nanotechnology. Nano goo is the white plaque and black plaque doctors see in autopsies. There is evidence at the site Byebyebluesky.com/morgellons that if you take a 60x magnifying glass and scan your fruit and veggies, it's covered in nanobots. The nanobots turn to white and black goo when frequencies hit it. Tony from youtube channel "herbs plus bead works" has been studying this and posted his photos at the website I listed above. According to Edgar Cayce this planet has been manipulated with artificial technologies implanted in humans dating back tens of thousands of years. This is what happened in Atlantis and why that experiment was ended. The same is happening today.

There are many reasons for gender confusion. However, I believe toxicity and xenoestrogens are a factor in a number of cases. It is tragic when people are poisoned in a manner that makes their lives so difficult. Some unfortunate individuals end up in an in-between place because their DNA has been scrambled even before birth.

"The most significant declines were found in samples from men in North America, Europe, Australia and New Zealand, where many had sperm concentrations below 40 million/mL"Notice that this is NOT the entire population of the world. What are the numbers elsewhere? This from Wikipedia....."Global human population growth amounts to around 75 million annually, or 1.1% per year. The global population has grown from 1 billion in 1800 to 7 billion in 2012. It is expected to keep growing, and estimates have put the total population at 8.4 billion by mid-2030, and 9.6 billion by mid-2050. Many nations with rapid population growth have low standards of living, whereas many nations with low rates of population growth have high standards of living.[1]"..... So apparently there is no need to panic that humankind is about to go extinct. At the same time today's article DEFINITELY UNDERSCORES all the major problems in our current higher standard of living communities. Interestingly if we look around in our own world we will find large families still exist living under various circumstances. However, the trend has gone out of popularity due to the high cost and demands placed on proper child rearing. Parents might spend many sleepless nights worrying about how to fund their children's college educations for example, and decide to limit their number of offspring. Meanwhile, on the poor side of town I am aware of mothers who have had multiple children that were fathered from multiple boyfriends with little concern for the children's future. This style of living and raising children seems to have become increasingly accepted by our society at large and the mothers and children living under this situation are supported by the welfare system giving rise to a "What me worry?" attitude. Let's just keep cranking out those little welfare bonuses.

I think our lifestyle has a lot to do with infertility in both men and women. But those numbers are dangerously high. Funny enough estrogen is the culprit of prostate cancer, because the man doesn't have enough testosterone to balance out the estrogen. I think with the right diet, exercise regimen, understanding the endocrine system we can implement small things to improve that. What is scary is that younger men and women are being affected by it. And now children are given electronics to keep themselves occupied, contributing to this vicious cycle. But kudos to Dr. Mercola for bringing needed information to this topic, and how we can help to eliminate the things we can do to improve fertility. I am trying to conceive now at 40, fortunately I'm still quite healthy for my age, but the clinic that is assisting me, has many people with fertility issues. I constantly see people with cell phones in their pocket, ears, etc. We are so disconnected from so many things because of technology today. Sad.

Fertility clinics are EVERYWHERE. You can turn on your local, national or tabloid news show and see the latest celeb or average citizen who just can't seem to make a baby and you see some doctor administering all kinds of meds to help the process along. What I see them putting people through just to have a child seems really personal and invasive for me. I agree, I think it is all environmental and it's the bad food we're eating. Also, you have boys going through puberty and girls menstruating at 8, 9 or 10 years old. All seems to be treated as normal but it is not.

What about driving a car ? The highest EMF are in car. It is EMF field with lower frequency but is high and important. Some cars have 1 mGauss, some have 50 mGauss. The decreasing rate in fertility has some correlation with car using - in Africa where cars are less common than in USA men's sperm quality is much better. The same I can say about home electricity - in my opinion so called body Voltage - voltage induced on body by 115/230 VAC could be much more important than for example GSM tower radiation. Again Africa with low grid (and with quite high amount of GSM users) is much better

DR Mercola Sorry to say but I am a little specialist because I own the worse car ever made in terms off EMF field - Citroen Xsara Picasso with EMF field above 200 mGauss. I decrease this field to about 30 mGauss using ferromagnetic shield under the sit (where producer place Accumulator !!!!) and using LC filter field which cuts above about 40 Hz (2000 per minute - alternator rotation) - so I am sure I am talking about fields connected with engine rotation.

Yes, the sperm count is in deep trouble, but the little girls sitting in classrooms all across America are being bombarded by wi-fi radiation that is damaging the embryo's and even worse, the mitochondrial DNA that is what is passed on from generation to generation. That microwave energy from the wi-fi is mutating those cells and the disaster is coming! The children of our children will have over 57.7% fetal deaths, miscarriages, and physical deformations far worse than the thalidomide disaster that struck infants years ago!

Everyone should avoid processed foods and especially those containing COTTONSEED OIL which is esp. common in junk food. In regions of China where it is the primary oil in the diet, fertility rates have fallen by 50%. This is in a country where people want to conceive to the extent allowed by law, too. Other "bad" oils may not be harmful in exactly the same way, but do not contribute to health. When the human biome is under stress, one of the first things to go is reproduction, because it is not necessary at that moment. At least until the body rebuilds itself.

The reproductive organs require good nutritional status to function optimally. That is why we are seeing so many health problems of that nature. reproductive organs, heart, brain, etc. are priorities and get first-choice uptake on minerals. Unfortunately, a lot of toxins are also attached to mineral compounds. When these enter the vital organs (site specific and concentrated), cancer is one result. Toxins disrupt normal pathways and energy fields, causing tremendous chaos.

It is very clear that the so-called elites who direct the policies of "partner governments" see population growth as the main threat to their profits and continuing hegemony over the slaves they control, tax, and direct. Thus these statistics are no more than we should expect. But I would be interested to see how adopting a kosher lifestyle affects these figures.

Wait! Less customers is better for profits? I never got the argument that the elites are trying to reduce the population.

poshest - the "elites" care nothing about the "health" of the population - it is clear that a chronically sick human being would be more profitable than a healthy human - so the sickening of the population makes good business sense

"poshest" they first "milk" you for what you're worth, then they spit you out. But I cannot say with any certainty that population reduction was their intent, rather it was probably and simply profits, regardless of the end result.

Infertility is a problem that affects one in six couples, which represents approximately 15% of the population who wants to start a family. In 30% of infertile couples, the male factor is one of the main causes. Factors reported by Dr. Mercola such as bisphenol A (BPA) are associated with several chronic metabolic diseases including obesity and diabetes. Obesity increases the risk of associated diseases, such as type 2 diabetes mellitus [5], dyslipidemia, cholelithiasis, hypertension, coronary heart disease [7], stroke, endometrial and breast cancer, premature aging and neurodegenerative diseases [8].

It is estimated that complications derived from obesity contribute to more than 4,000,000 deaths per year worldwide, representing 7% of mortality from all causes. The global prevalence of obesity is increasing among both sexes, with associated impacts on chronic health and medical comorbidities. Similarly, the effects of obesity on reproductive health are increasingly recognized. Adiposity is associated with reduced fertility in men, with a complex and multifactorial etiology. The reported effects of obesity on semen parameters and impaired fertility are contrasting: some studies show a clear reduction in reproductive outcomes associated with higher body mass index.

These controversies may be due to the complex pathophysiology and interaction between gonadotropins and end organs, as well as genetic and epigenetic changes and oxidative stress on fertility and male function. www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/abs/pii/S1521693423001013 (2024).--

Thanks Grulla. The European Commission has launched a consultation on a draft proposal to phase out the use of the controversial chemical bisphenol A in food contact materials, including plastic boxes, protective linings for cans and food processing equipment. The proposal follows scientific advice from the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA), which concluded in April 2023 that current levels of exposure to bisphenol A (BPA) pose a health risk to consumers. EFSA set a tolerable daily intake (TDI), the amount of a substance in food considered safe for people, at 0.2 nanograms per kilogram (ng/kg) of body weight, which is 20,000 times lower than the provisional TDI.

of 4 g/kg. (or 4,000 ng/kg) body weight recommended in its previous opinion (2015). The public consultation began on February 8 and will be open until March 9. The Commission will then present a legislative proposal for approval by member states. The proposed ban on the substance, widely used since the 1960s, will apply to food and beverage cans, kitchen utensils, tableware and items in contact with food used in professional food production, he stressed. the block executive in a press release.

It's not just men's fertility - it's men's growing inability to produce male children. Don't look at global statistics - just look around you. Mostly young girls and baby girls. I first noticed this a few years ago and nothing has changed to cause me to reverse my opinion. On our street, and no, I don't know everyone, I see parents with 2 girls. Very few boys in sight.

There is just no end to the attacks on us to prevent us from being anything close to being human, reaching our full potential as human beings, or our ability to remotely function as a human being.

Very real Just, consider Hitler and his henchmen victimized an entire continent and exterminated millions in their pursuit of the so-called "Master Race." The concept of a dominant, white, blonde, blue-eyed Nordic race did not originate with Hitler. The idea was mobilized in the United States and cultivated in California, decades before Hitler came to power. California eugenicists carried out a campaign of ethnic cleansing of the American eugenics movement. During the early decades of the 20th century, California eugenicists included powerful but little-known racial scientists such as Army venereal disease specialist Dr. Paul Popenoe, citrus magnate and Polytechnic benefactor Paul Gosney, banker of Sacramento Charles M.

Goethe, as well as members of the State Board of Charities and Corrections and Board of Regents of the University of California. Eugenics would have been such strange armchair talk if it had not been for extensive funding by corporate philanthropies, specifically the Carnegie Institution, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Harriman Railroad fortune. They were all allied with some of the most respected scientists in the United States, coming from such prestigious universities as Stanford, Yale, Harvard and Princeton. These scholars embraced race theory and racial science, and then falsified and distorted data to serve the racist goals of eugenics. www.globalresearch.ca/horrifying-american-roots-nazi-eugenics/5784668

So sad Gui, so many threads to Eugenics, Depopulation, Breeding for Homo Superior, Transhumanism with deep roots back to sections of the U.S. population who would be, in FDR's words, Royalist. Their dream to be Filthy Rich by making everyone else Poor and Filthy. Waited on hand and foot with little to no creativity, build little to nothing, with a dominant skill of manipulation. Actually, I see Blacks being promoted if not celebrated on almost every web site, as though they were some sort of contemporary Master Race. ----- In contrast, almost everywhere I go on the web, jokes at the expense of the German people are widely accepted. I take issue with this because, although I am not German, my experience with both German Americans and Germans from Germany is that they're remarkably hardworking and KIND to a fault. They have LONG been the victims of widespread propaganda and I deeply resent that, along with everything that is Politically Correct -- Political Correctness simply being the accepted prejudices of the day.

The Struggle for an individual to reach for their own individual full potential exist for everyone, whether they even recognize it or not. No matter what the circumstances. To find oneself marooned on a desert island one would be under most extremes to achieve and maintain whatever this could be for them. In a community, such exists also. Similar to the Island example the conditions one finds themselves in have a major influence of what is achievable for what this full potential can be. The conditions creating the structure of a community has implications in the perimeters of how an individual can possibly explore or evolve.

One is not exclusive of the other. Too much one way or the other and both can be negatively or positively affected. When currently humanity from conception on is being neutered, sterilized, gender disrupted, health disrupted by the assaults on the Natural World and on Humanity by conditions set forth by those who would be New Gods. In a system rigged by their design to achieve just such a thing, there is no organic Capitalism, a give and take between the Individual and Community cycling back and forth for the best conditions for the Full Potential for both the Individual and The Community. Does a Master Gardener plant their tomatoes in the cold depths of January?

Or plant Water Lily's in a dry desert void of water? Or do they assess conditions, learn how they affect the quality of the plants desired. Or learn as much range of what the full potentials are in those circumstances so both the Gardener and the Garden can face the days of struggle through drought, monsoons still to come teaching even more than had been realized before. Full Potential is an unreachable goal we all should attempt to find just the same acknowledging no matter how much we know or have learned, there will still be more to reach for.

In what way is the human race particularly special? ----- Giant reptiles evolved, thrived, and died out over a longer period than we've strutted across the globe and they at least had the grace not to leave a ton of microplastics in their wake. ----- With the exception of J.S. Bach, Isaac Newton, and a few others, our time on stage has been the largely disastrous production of a bunch of lying narcissists. Prove me wrong.

Swilliam, didn't reptiles and their prehistoric contemporaries leave something far more insidious than microplastics - petroleum - microplastics' parent? Not my job to prove/disprove your nihilism, but go ask a small child how important their mommy or daddy is to them, or a parent about their children. Yes, we're not worthy of God or his love, but for some reason He finds us kind of special, and gave us dominion over all other life forms. He also gave us free will, and that's where most, if not all problems arise from.
